

MUST SPRAY TO SAVE ORCHARDS

University Expert Says Farmers
Must Take Time for Process or Face Heavy Fruit Losses.

Declaring it "unfortunately true that there is not time enough to spray," Professor W. S. Brock of the department of horticulture of the University of Illinois said in a statement today that "as a result the farm orchard is rapidly disappearing off the face of the earth."

"Fruit trees must be sprayed not only to produce fruit but in order to live," the statement said. "Extension workers from the university agricultural college have decided that cooperation in spraying is the best solution of the farm orchard problem, because it permits the use of a gasoline driven outfit without which so many lose enthusiasm long before the season is over. A power outfit makes possible extremely rapid spraying. In the corn belt this is an absolute necessity, because the planting time or in wheat harvest quick work is necessary if spraying and farm operations are to be carried on at the same time."

"Four communities in two Illinois counties tried the spray ring method in the season of 1921 with entire satisfaction. The cost of spraying each tree ranged from 61 cents to $1.25, depending upon the location of the orchard, water supply and weather conditions. This sum included labor, materials and depreciation on equipment."

"One of the most significant things about this movement, however, is the amount of money made or saved in a given season, but the fact that trees thus sprayed are saved from the ravages of scale and so enabled to produce many larger and better crops in the future. The initial cost following many barren years due to disease, insects and neglect is usually light. The farmer must spray singly or cooperatively if he is to have good fruit for home consumption."

HUTCHINS GIVES WOODLAND TALK

Lecture-Recitals at Broadway of Interest to Nature-Lovers; Davenport Enthusiast.

Charles Bowman Hutchins, the California singer of bird songs, who delighted huge crowds in Davenport last week, will begin a series of three woodland lecture-recitals in Broadway Presbyterian church tomorrow evening. Each of his programs features bird songs and calls, whistling solos in 12 ways, fascinating stories of wild life and rapidly painted colored crayon pictures of birds.

Hutchins has studied bird life since he was a boy on the Pacific coast. He has mastered hundreds of their songs and calls. He applies them to modern and classical music with marvelous effect. He also has a remarkable memory for colors seen in the field, and he is able to create beautiful paintings in a few moments' time. Hutchins has painted over ten thousand such pictures, and has given every one of them away to the children who were in his audiences.

Every year Mr. Hutchins makes a trip to the far east where he speaks in leading educational institutes. He is the foremost naturalist of the country that was born and reared in the west and immense crowds flock to hear him in New York, Boston, Washington, D. C., and other eastern cities.

The ladies' aid of Broadway Presbyterian is sponsoring this Rock Island series. The first program is tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Silver offering is the only admission. Other programs are Friday night, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.
